AMSA Traveling Exhibit

In the five years since its first exhibition, the American Medallic Sculpture Association has grown in size and diversity. From a small group of professional medallists, mainly trained in the traditions of the struck medal, AMSA has grown to include substantial numbers of collectors, scholars, curators and—especially important—students and sculptors whose backgrounds are in such areas as bronze casting, multi-media assemblage and wood carving. Along with this expansion of membership has come a multiplication of approaches to medallic art. Round bi-face portrait and commemorative medallions have been joined by free-form pieces, by multiple-interlocking medals and by expressive and abstract compositions.

Perhaps the greatest source of inspiration for the development of the medal in the United States and Canada has been exposure to work from abroad, especially from Europe. Through personal attendance and the sharing of catalogues, many Americans were first exposed to contemporary ideas in medallic art through the expositions of the Fédération Internationale de la Médaille in Florence in 1983 and Stockholm in 1985. The culmination of this encounter was the 1987 FIDEM Congress in Colorado Springs, when many AMSA members had their first opportunity to see a large display of work from abroad and, most importantly, to meet personally with colleagues from around the world and share ideas and techniques in a face-to-face and informal setting.

It is with great pride in our progress and with a realistic appreciation of the potential still to be developed, that the American Medallic Sculpture Association has assembled this traveling exhibition of recent works by our members.
